IN BOSTON MARKETS.

Butter Market Has Taken an Easter Turn.

Boston, June 10.—The local butter market has taken an easier tone under heavy rains, a rather light demand and also because of a weak tendency at outside centers. A good deal of the new creamery butter coming forward is going into cold storage, but there seems to be quite enough on the open market to meet current needs. Receipts of cheese are steadily increasing, but the supply of fancy cheeses is still light and steady. Old cheese stock is plenty and easy.

Onions have been brought safely through the winter, rough and unpeeled, and are now in great demand.

At the extent of the calamity was realized between four and five hundred men were dead. Following this, from 27 to 30 died each day until warm, dry sunlight and drastic sanitary conditions brought relief.
